

Martha Amore bio

Martha Amore loves the cold and dark of Alaska, where she has lived for 25 years. She teaches writing at the University of Alaska Anchorage and holds a Master of Fine Arts in fiction and an Interdisciplinary Studies Ph.D. in creative writing. After winning a Rasmusen award, she was able to take a summer off work to complete her collection of short fiction, In the Quiet Season and Other Stories, published by the University of Alaska Press in 2018. Along with Lucian Childs, she is a contributing editor of Building Fires in the Snow: A Collection of Alaska LGBTQ Short Fiction and Poetry, which was a finalist for a LAMBDA Literary Award. She is currently hard at work on her first novel. Check in with her at atmarthaamore.com.